

Mödling mobility dialogue

Over the next few years, some 200 dwelling units are to be built in a housing development on the former central police training school premises in Mödling. The municipality of Mödling invited local residents to a dialogue in order to develop a sustainable mobility concept for the area surrounding the former school grounds.

PlanSinn supported and supervised the dialogue process, which consisted of two major events and three workshops. Taking different modes of transport as their starting point, the participants drafted goals and key measures for each in the respective zones. Local politicians and administrators were purposely involved in the process to ensure that the results are taken into account in the further development of the area.
